April 2012

Happy almost summer-or, already summer, if we're going by the weather! As we wrap up the spring semester and move into the research season, remember that I'm happy to work with you and / or your research assistants on search strategies and resources. As always, feel free to contact me with questions, comments, or recommendations.

Get personal research assistance with "Book A Librarian"

USC students, faculty and staff who want help with their research can make an appointment for a free consultation service that provides a person-to-person session with a librarian. The sessions can help identify ways to access and navigate electronic resources; develop search strategies; discover and locate primary source materials; search the web for relevant and reliable information; and locate materials for a literature review.

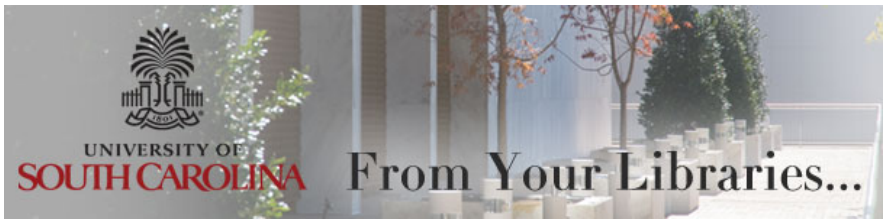
Carry the library in your pocket

University Libraries has introduced a mobile version of its website. The site includes mobile-friendly applications for some of the library's most used resources, such as the library catalog, Ask a Librarian, the computer availability page and some library databases. The site is optimized for viewing on a wide range of mobile devices.

To experience the site's full potential, use your smartphone or tablet to view our site at http://m.library.sc.edu

Planning for technology-based class projects?

To paraphrase Tom Cruise in the movie Jerry Maguire-- "Help us help you." Or more precisely, help us help your students succeed. If you plan to assign technology-based class projects, then you need to read this!



Would you like to see previous issues of the "From Your Libraries ..." newsletter? Would you like to read a newsletter targeted for another department? All copies of the newsletters are available on the University Libraries Publications page. A number of other publications produced by the Libraries also are available at this link.
