Hello from Thomas Cooper Library!

I hope that the end of your spring semester is going well. The Thomas Cooper Library is bustling with activity and you will see some highlights in this issue of From Your Libraries.

Please feel free to contact me with questions, concerns, or suggestions.

Sincerely,
Karen W. Brown

Get personal research assistance with "Book A Librarian"

USC students, faculty and staff who want help with their research can make an appointment for a free consultation service that provides a person-to-person session with a librarian. The sessions can help identify ways to access and navigate electronic resources; develop search strategies; discover and locate primary source materials; search the web for relevant and reliable information; and locate materials for a literature review.

Carry the library in your pocket

University Libraries has introduced a mobile version of its website. The site includes mobile-friendly applications for some of the library's most used resources, such as the library catalog, Ask a Librarian, the computer availability page and some library databases. The site is optimized for viewing on a wide range of mobile devices.

To experience the site's full potential, use your smartphone or tablet to view our site at <http://m.library.sc.edu>
