Scope and Contents Note

This collection documents the life and work of Pat Conroy (1945-2016), considered to be one of the preeminent figures in contemporary Southern literature. Born in 1945, Conroy has written best-selling novels and memoirs as well as poetry, essays and screenplays and even a cookbook, The Pat Conroy Cookbook: Recipes of My Life (1999).
His works are primarily autobiographical in nature. His experience as the oldest of seven children born to an abusive Marine father inspired his works The Great Santini (1976), The Death of Santini (2013). He attended and played basketball at The Citadel in Charleston, South Carolina, inspiring his works The Boo (1970), Lords of Discipline (1980) and My Losing Season (2002). His time teaching African American students in a two room school house on Daufuskie Island, South Carolina in 1970 was the basis for his work The Water is Wide (1972). His other works are also informed by his lived experiences, including his marriages, parenthood, the loss of his own parents and sibling, familial strife (The Prince of Tides, 1986 and My Reading Life, 2010) and his sense of place (South of Broad, 2009) which is apparent in his writings about his adopted home town of Beaufort, SC and his time spent in Rome, Italy (Beach Music, 1995).

The collection contains manuscript material from each of Conroy’s works, including unpublished works. Conroy is unable to type and writes each draft in long-hand and sends these drafts out to a typist. These typed drafts are also included. The collection also contains professional and personal correspondence and personal journals kept by Conroy.

The collection also contains correspondence, journals, financial and legal information, photographs and clippings and documents relating to Pat Conroy’s life and the lives of his immediate family.

Also included in the archive are the papers of Conroy’s high school English teacher and mentor, Eugene Norris. Norris’s papers contain material relating to his relationship with Conroy as well as papers relating to the early Civil Rights Movement and the desegregation of Beaufort schools. Of particular note are the papers of Reuben G. Holmes, a businessman and inventor in Civil War Beaufort, SC included within the Norris papers.

Also of note, the archive contains the papers of Donald Conroy, Pat Conroy’s father. Don Conroy was the inspiration for Pat Conroy’s title character in The Great Santini and his abusive relationship with his children is a major theme in Pat Conroy’s works. A large portion of Don Conroy’s papers relate to his military career, however, of particular note are the scrapbooks kept by Don Conroy as the Conroy family archive, referred to as the “Arcs” and explained in detail at the beginning of the Donald Conroy Papers series.

Additional notes and description occur at the beginning of series in the finding aid. All unique folder titles and usages recorded in quotes are Conroy’s own and have not been supplied by the processors.
The 2016 addition of materials was collected after Conroy’s death in March 2016 from his wife Cassandra King.

Related Material

Eugene Norris related materials are also located in the Millen Ellis Papers, 1962-2005, at the Caroliniana Library at the University of South Carolina.

Reuben G. Holmes related material can be found in the Christensen Family Papers, 1806-1999, at the Caroliniana Library at the University of South Carolina.

Series VII: Correspondence

This series consists of correspondence that was written to and by Pat Conroy. It has been divided into four sub-series: General, Professional, Personal, and correspondence written by Conroy. General Correspondence contains different types of correspondence and includes but is not limited to fan mail, cards, invitations, and some topical correspondence. Fan mail and other general correspondence are arranged by date. These are ordered by year and years with multiple folders have the months written on them. Other types of correspondence such as cards, notes, and those relating to a specific subject are arranged alphabetically.

Professional and Personal correspondence are arranged separately to reflect the original order kept by Conroy. These series are arranged by the last name of the creator. If there was not a last name present, they are organized by first name at the end of the subseries. At the end of both subseries is a section of correspondence from others to others. These are arranged by the last name of the recipient.

Professional correspondence begins in the late 1960s and follows Conroy’s career to the present. There is a substantial amount of correspondence relating to his book career from notable correspondents such as his literary agent, Julian Bach, editors, Jonathan Galassi, Austin Olney, and Nan Talese and literary agent Marly Rusoff. Correspondence from Colonel Courvoisie, also known as “The Boo” is in professional and not personal correspondence.

The Personal Correspondence subseries begins in the early 1960s while Conroy was still in high school and continues through his time at the Citadel and throughout his career as an author. In the Personal Correspondence, there are a few people who share the same name. For the purposes of this series, Conroy’s sister, Carol Conroy, is known in the collection as Carol Ann Conroy to distinguish her from his aunt, also Carol Conroy. Conroy’s uncle, James Conroy, is known in the collection as Reverend James Patrick Conroy while his brother, also James Conroy, is known as James “Jim” Conroy. Conroy’s mother, though in the majority of the correspondence is known as Peg Conroy, is included as Frances Margaret “Peg” Peek Conroy Egan. A significant amount of the correspondence is from family members including the Conroys, Gillespies, Harpers, and his grandmother Margaret “Stanny” Stanton.

Correspondence that was written by Conroy is arranged by the recipient’s last name and is at the end of the series.

Series XVII: Eugene Norris Related Materials

Eugene Norris was born and raised in Newberry, South Carolina, the child of Eugene Edward and Reba Lorick Norris. He graduated with an undergraduate degree from Newberry College, attended Boston University and earned a Master’s Degree from the University of Georgia. His professional career was spent teaching English at Beaufort High School where he was also a guidance counsellor. The collection includes student work and yearbook student photographs. His most famous student and long-time friend was the author Pat Conroy who credited Norris with setting him on the path to literary achievement.

There was more to Eugene Norris than a gifted teacher. He was a progressive in a South Carolina disinclined to move beyond its comfort zones. This world view made him an early advocate for civil rights. He was willing to challenge students with edgy and modern literature. The collection includes a controversy over teaching J.D. Salinger’s Catcher in the Rye. Finally, he was a passionate advocate for excellence in teaching pushing for a more professional high school English faculty. His work on behalf of teaching won him a number of awards.

Eugene Norris died in 2004 at the age of 72. He was buried in Newberry, South Carolina.

Subseries A: Eugene Norris Related Material

This collection includes materials both by and about Eugene Norris as well as clippings, papers, yearbooks, photographs, church orders of service, and articles on topics that interested him. It is roughly divided into personal materials, education, Beaufort High School, book censorship, civil rights, the church and civil rights, juvenile delinquency, mental health, and other interests. Within these rough categories items are chronological where that is possible. There is of course overlapping: the correspondence in the earlier folders includes concerns about race and teaching.

Eugene Norris materials also appear in the Millen Ellis Papers, 1962-2005, at the Caroliniana Library at the University of South Carolina

Subseries C: Reuben G. Holmes Material

Holmes was born to a struggling Massachusetts farm family in 1820. At some point in the latter 1830’s the family took the Erie Canal west. His hopes for his own farm were dashed when his mother became ill and he was designated to take her back East and stay with her. He was at times a farmer, merchant, broker, salesman. He patented labor-saving devices like an improved butter churn in 1860 and a clothes wringer in 1862 but never realized much if any profit from these inventions. The papers contain the sale of his patents. In late 1863 he moved from Massachusetts to Newark, New Jersey but left shortly afterward.

Holmes memoir notes that at some point he tried to enlist in the Union Army but was prevented by an injury. Nonetheless, he recognized that there were economic opportunities in the Union-occupied South. In early 1864 he asked for and apparently was granted permission to buy land in and around Beaufort, South Carolina. By March 2, 1864 he had arrived in Beaufort and over at least the next ten years acted as merchant and realtor. Most of the materials in this collection are mercantile, bills either to or from Holmes or requests to or from him for goods. Around 1870, he acquired stock in the Port Royal and Augusta Railroad. He bought land near Varnville and attempted to found the town of Almeda, named after his daughter. Neither of these ventures succeeded. The last of the papers in this collection is dated November 16, 1874, at which point Holmes is still in South Carolina.

Reuben Holmes’ memoirs note that one of his motives coming South was to help the newly-freed slaves. As a literate adult male outsider he also had the opportunity to participate politically. Holmes was elected from Beaufort County as a representative to the 1868 South Carolina Constitutional Convention which wrote a new constitution enfranchising adult male African-Americans. He was also Chairman of the county Board of Electors in 1868. The papers contain lists of voters in January 1869.

Holmes did more for the freed slaves. Among the papers in this collection are receipts for monies advanced to blacks serving in the Union Army. These so-called colored troops were promised both bounties and pay, neither of which was quickly forthcoming. From 1865-1867
Holmes either gave or loaned these men against the monies the government had promised to pay them. It seems he gave them cash although it is possible he gave them stores. The receipts all have dollar values.

It is unclear when Reuben Holmes left South Carolina. He died in Providence, Rhode Island and was buried in Westboro, Massachusetts.

A collection of Reuben G. Holmes papers can be found in the Christensen Family Papers, 1806-1999, of the Caroliniana Library at the University of South Carolina. They contain receipts, some of the black troop IOU’s and a manuscript memoir.

The papers of Reuben G. Holmes are divided into first, documents arranged chronologically and second, receipts of black troops advanced monies which are alphabetical, the way Holmes kept these materials. The first dated document is May 20, 1857, the last November 16, 1874. Undated materials are filed before dated ones.

Eugene Norris memorial poster, 2004
Donald Patrick Conroy (April 4, 1921 – May 9, 1998) was from Chicago, Illinois and attended college at St. Ambrose College in Davenport, Iowa where he played basketball. He left college to enlist in the United States Marine Corp, where he became a colonel and served in World War II, the Vietnam War, and as a member of the Black Sheep Squadron during the Korean War. He married Frances “Peg” Peek and together they had seven children: Pat, Carol, Mike, Kathy, Jim, Tim, and Tom Conroy. Don is known for being his son Pat Conroy’s inspiration for the character Marine Lt. Col. "Bull" Meechum in his book The Great Santini. Eventually Don and Peggy divorced, and he later retired to Atlanta, Georgia. There he was diagnosed with colon cancer and passed away in 1998. He was buried in Beaufort National Cemetery in South Carolina. It was the same cemetery where they filmed the scene of the death of the character he inspired.

This collection consists of contents that were in Donald Conroy’s possession at the time of his death. Included in the collection notes, brochures, religious materials, report cards and other information pertaining to his children’s education, correspondence, items related to his military service, financial information, photographs, newspaper clippings, and miscellaneous materials including books, and items such as cufflinks, and even a wallet.

Framed poem “Marine Fighter Pilot” By Andrew Kovacs

Subseries I: Scrapbooks

These scrapbooks, known as “The Arcs,” were created by Don Conroy. Don created the archive to document the Conroy family, including his son, Pat’s career as an author (and Don’s borrowed fame from being the source material for some of Pat’s books, including, The Great Santini). The scrapbooks contain various keepsakes from the past century (from approximately 1910 until 2005) deemed valuable by Don Conroy, including but not limited to family photos, newspaper clippings, correspondence, such as letters between family members, fan mail, important documents exchanged between Pat Conroy and publishers or production companies, as well as notations, and sometimes even snide commentary. Notations in quotes are titles given to the scrapbook by Don.

Don’s college basketball days: Newspaper clippings c 1940-1949, 1941; Newspapers 1947, 1948; Letter from Don to his mother 1943; Basketball team photo 1940.
