A Census of Medieval Manuscripts in South Carolina Collections

Scott Gwara
University of South Carolina
Publication of this catalogue has been aided by the Humanities Council of South Carolina and Thomas Cooper Library, University of South Carolina.

Copyright © 2007 by Scott Gwara. All rights reserved.
Manufactured in the United States of America.

Inside covers:
Columbia, SC, University of South Carolina, Rare Books and Special Collections Early MS 74; a monumental glossed bible from northern France (probably Paris), ca. 1225; text: Luke's Gospel and the Glossa Ordinaria.

Gwara, Scott.
A census of medieval manuscripts in South Carolina Collections / Scott Gwara.
p. cm.
Includes bibliographical references.
1. Thomas Cooper Library. Dept. of Rare Books and Special Collections—Exhibitions.
2. Manuscripts, Medieval—South Carolina—Exhibitions.
I. Thomas Cooper Library. Dept. of Rare Books and Special Collections.
Z6612.R3 G8 2007
Table of Contents

Introduction ...................................................................................... 4
Acknowledgments ............................................................................. 8

Manuscripts at:

  Charleston Library Society............................................................... 9
  College of Charleston................................................................. 13
  Columbia College........................................................................ 13
  Columbia Museum of Art .............................................................. 17
  University of South Carolina....................................................... 17
  Bob Jones University Museum & Gallery......................... 62
  Bob Jones University Library ..................................................... 65
  Furman University ..................................................................... 69
  Wofford College ........................................................................ 70
List of Plates ................................................................................... 71
Addendum ....................................................................................... 72